24 HOURS IN

Paris

MY PERFECT 24 HOURS IN PARIS

Wake up and go for an extended run in the Parc des Buttes Chaumont, afterwards visit one of the many food markets (Marché Bastille) and get some amazing treats for your subsequent picnic. Or if you decide to have brunch instead of a picnic go to Rose Bakery, because everything you get in there tastes amazing. On Sundays I love having brunch at the hotel Auberge de Flora. Great interior and huge range of choice!

Visit an exhibition at Palais de Tokyo, which is the most creative and fun museum in Paris, or one at the Musée Galliera, a paradise for those who appreciate fashion.

Go bargain-hunting in vintage shops like Son et Images or go to the Limited Edition Square, which is a shop in a gallery. Everything in there is „Made in France“ and designed by young, up-and-coming designers. Beautiful fashion pieces and each one is very individual. Or find a unique item at the flea market (there are plenty of street markets: especially on weekends).

For a quick lunch, I'd recommend Café-Bistro Abri as I especially love their sandwiches.

Chilling on a beautiful terrace or rooftop while having a drink with friends, that is how I imagine a perfect start to a good night out. A beautiful venue for having an after-work drink or sundowner is La Bellevilloise, where you meet wonderful, interesting and kind people.

After watching the sun go down I'd start preparing some great food for those I love to treat them, or meet them for dinner somewhere nice, at Lao Siam for example. They have the best Thai food in town and definitely the best Bo Bun you can find. Before hitting the clubs I always like to have drinks at the Le Paloma bar or at the wonderful bar Le Comptoir Général. Two of the best clubs for getting all dressed up and dancing until the sun comes up (or even longer) are Concrete or the Rex Club.

The last and best thing: cycling back home on my bike. Happy, a little tipsy and enjoying the deserted streets of a Paris which is still asleep.

*Enjoy exploring,
Josipa*
